

Capsule 4 –Food Autonomy – April 2014

A Matter of Respect

In order to achieve both food accessibility and greater decision-making power, there must be respect for nature, human beings and the environment in a context of fairness and equality for all people of the world.

Food self-sufficiency involves the development of direct ties between the production environment and individuals and leads to a fairer and more cooperative distribution of wealth.

It naturally gives rise to agriculture on a human scale and environmentally-responsible management.

Working together towards a common vision of food autonomy!
